Public Building & Planning Law, Environmental Regulations

Public building law, planning law and environmental law are the core areas of public law which govern the planning and approval of real estate and infrastructure projects as well as industrial plants and commercial developments. In recent years, these procedures have become increasingly complex and, in addition, there has been a marked increase in the number of requirements which apply to the planning, approval, construction and operation of projects and industrial plants.

We regard ourselves as project lawyers. Our vast expertise and experience enables us to provide you with comprehensive strategic advice and business-focused solutions for each stage of your project. Our specialist expertise includes:

- Planning and approval procedures
- Public and civil law contracts
- Political processes and public participation procedures
- Comprehensive legal support to the public sector
- Risk analysis
- Administrative decisions
- Legal action

“The GSK Stockmann team was crucial to the success of one of our largest and most complex greenfield developments. Their in-depth legal expertise and prudent handling of the authorities and the various stakeholders involved ensured that every stage of the project ran smoothly.”

Frank Dörflinger, Managing Director, Activ Development
