➤ Regulation is constantly in flux. Technological, political and social developments drive regulatory changes. An important part of our work consists in identifying the full scope of potential restrictions, opportunities and risks at an early date.

Public Law / Regulatory

The state stipulates the rules for both the private and the public sector. We advise on public law requirements and find various options for you to successfully complete your project within the respective legal framework. We will guide you through all procedures regarding planning, approval and other administrative steps. Where necessary, we represent our clients in administrative and constitutional courts.

Regulation is constantly in flux. An important part of our work consists in identifying potential restrictions, opportunities and risks at an early date. Based on our insights, we then liaise closely with our clients to develop strategies with the aim of influencing legislative processes leading up to new regulatory requirements. In particular, we offer legal advice on:

- Constitutional law
- European law
- Budget law and municipal laws
- Procurement and state aid law
- Administrative law
- The right of access to information
- Building and planning law (urban planning and development)
- Environmental law and industrial plant approval
- Energy law
- Technology law and product approval
- Nursing homes, healthcare and health insurance law
